AAAD 51: Masquerades of Blackness: Representing Race
(First Year Seminar)

This course is designed to investigate how race has been represented in cinema historically, with a particular focus on or interest in representations of race when blackness is masqueraded. Its intent is to launch an investigative inquiry into masquerades of blackness across various time periods, examine how we as spectators are manipulated by these cinematic constructions of race, and explore how race is marked or coded. The course similarly seeks to engage in discussion, promote debate, stimulate discourse, and facilitate critical readings of racial masquerades in screen representations.

Fall 2022
Tues/Thurs – 9:30-10:45 AM
Instructor: Michael Lambert

Meeting Times: MW 1:25PM - 2:40PM

Description: Boundary making, migration, and population displacement have been significant dimensions of the contemporary African experience. How has boundary making, broadly defined (inclusive of national borders, rural-urban distinctions, and ethnic and racial groupings, for example), shaped contemporary Africa? What types of and through what processes were boundaries created? How did the African people respond to these processes? What population displacements unfolded in the context of this boundary making? And how did the people of Africa make sense of and understand boundary making, migration, and displacement? These are some of the questions we will be examining in this interactive and discussion oriented class. We will build our examination of these issues around six novels written by African authors. These novels will provide insight into the ways by which boundaries, migration, and displacement impacted the everyday lives of the African people.

Meeting Times: TuTh 2:00PM - 3:15PM

Description: A survey of African American political development from emancipation to the present. The course examines the dynamics of minority group politics with African Americans as the primary unit of analysis. Students consider African American politics in domestic and global contexts and issues of local, regional, national, and international relevance.
This course explores the Civil Rights Movement in the United States (1954-1968), with emphasis on the role of young people, students, women, the working class and several less celebrated giants of the era, as well as more familiar figures like Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Why did the movement happen when it did? Do all scholars even agree on its beginning and end dates? How was the struggle sustained? What in the end was accomplished in these years? Topics will include the legal battles in the courts and the freedom struggle in the streets, and will include in depth coverage of the battleground that was Little Rock Central High (pictured above). Class discussion, based on exceptionally interesting readings, will loom large in this course.

Instructor of AAAD 258 (001): ROBERT PORTER, winner of multiple teaching awards
Instructor: Joseph Jordan

Description: An interdisciplinary survey of African-descendant communities and the development and expression of African/black identities in the context of competing definitions of diaspora.
This course explores the experiences of African descended peoples in the Americas, pre-1800, with special attention to Brazil and, in North America, to the 13 colonies, (future) Canada, and Caribbean. Major themes include gender, culture, labor and resistance. Memorable readings, including both primary and secondary sources, will feature prominently. Discussions and class participation are central to this class.

AAAD 288 - Global Black Popular Cultures

AAAD 288 explores the routes and the intertwined histories, genealogies, and politics of Black cultural practices in the Black Atlantic world. Using an interdisciplinary approach and a close study of foundational concepts, we tackle critical questions around Black identity, identification, and belonging. First, we examine how pioneer scholars have defined Black popular culture in relation to the concepts of blackness, Diaspora, transnationalism, globalization, and postcolonialism. Then, we analyze how these notions and phenomena have characterized the movements and flows of Black mass culture through various cultural practices in the US, Africa, and parts of Western Europe.

INSTRUCTOR: DR. SAMBA CAMARA
Meeting Time: M-W 3:35 - 4:50PM

AAAD 290: Topics in African, African American, and Diaspora Studies

Instructor: Torri Staton

Meeting Times: Mo. 4:40PM - 5:40PM

Description: This course will focus on race, racism, and racial equity in the U.S. This course examines history, systems, and interracial interactions that have shaped modern-day American society as well as current systemic barriers. Students will learn vocabulary, examine race relations, examine systems, and reflect upon them in this course. (This section of AAAD 290 is a one credit hour course.)
This course explores the years before emancipation in the British Empire in 1833/34, with particular emphasis on Britain, the thirteen colonies in North America, Barbados, Bermuda and the lands that later became Canada. We will particularly concern ourselves with this central content question: In the British Empire what brought about the end of 1) the transatlantic slave trade and 2) the institution of slavery (at least in the book of law). We consider a wide range of actors in this course, from enslaved freedom fighters in the colonies to members of the British parliament. Readings extend from exceedingly interesting secondary sources to moving primary sources that are of permanent, lasting value to historians. Discussions, debates and student participation are at the center of AAAD 298.

Instructor: Robert Porter, winner of numerous teaching awards
Instructor: Lydia Boyd

Meeting Times: TuTh, 3:30PM - 4:45PM

Description: This course explores contemporary economic, political, and social factors influencing the health and welfare of African peoples. Emphasis is placed on understanding the cultural perspectives that shape non-Western experiences of health, disease, and notions of spiritual and physical well-being. Readings draw from the fields of anthropology, history, and public health.
Islam noir – or “black Islam” – is the term coined by colonial European scholars of Muslim Africa to describe how sub-Saharan Africans had “misappropriated” Islam. The term also contrasted Black practices of Islam with “Arab” Islamic cultures seen as purer. What followed was a decades long scholarship that persisted on portraying Black African Muslims as mere converts and in need of Arab authentication. AAAD 303 explores Islam in Africa beyond this orientalist picture. The course explores how Africans have historically indigenized Islam in ways that did not only transform local black culture, but that also changed the face of Islam in the world. First, we use specific case studies to explore the history of Islamization in Africa. Then, we use an interdisciplinary approach to Muslim African culture to explore the Africanization of Islam through oral tradition, international cultural networking, popular music, literature, film, and visual arts.

Class Time: MWF, 10:10-11:00am
AAAD 316
PUBLIC POLICY AND DEVELOPMENT IN AFRICA

Course Overview
This course explores how public policy is experienced on the African continent, particularly as it relates to ideas about “development.” Development has been a central organizing concept for colonial and post-colonial governance and continues to inform how both African states and international institutions interact with the continent’s populace. Yet, from its earliest days development has been a contested term that carries diverse meaning across contexts.

In this course we will work to rethink the development concept and the policies that surround it by asking: How do development policies and concepts enter everyday use and how do they affect ordinary people? How have ideas about development transformed from the colonial period to present day?

Students will engage a range of case studies from public health systems in Sierra Leone and food security in Tanzania to independence era decolonial thought in Ghana, infrastructure investment in Ethiopia, and contemporary youth unemployment across the continent. Some of the topics this course will cover are global health, food security, climate change, NGOs, privatization, microfinance, infrastructure, labor, and gender.
AAAD 320: Music of Africa

Instructor: David Pier

Meeting Times: TuTh, 11:00AM – 12:15PM

Description: An introduction to African music new and old, focusing on the continent's distinctive techniques and concepts, and on its musical interactions with the rest of the world. The politics of music making in various historical settings will be explored. Prior musical experience is helpful, but not required.

AAAD 330: 20th-Century African American Art

Instructor: John Bowles

Meeting Times: MWF 12:20PM – 1:00PM

Description: Focus on the historical development of African American art from the Harlem Renaissance of early 20th century through the Black Arts Movement and Feminist Art Movement 1960s and early 1970s.

AAAD 344: African American Theatre: Exploring Legacy and Contemporary Voices

Instructor: Howard Craft

Meeting Times: Mo. 3:20PM – 6:20PM

Description: This course investigates the history and legacy, as well as contemporary trends and ideas of African American drama through the study of its literary texts, performance styles, and cultural history. We will explore how the African American's dramatists voice is shaping cultural landscapes and ongoing conversations.
Instructor: Chris Massenburg

Meeting Times: TuTh 3:30PM – 4:45PM

This course will examine literature, film, art, and music from the Caribbean that illustrates and critiques the past and present impacts of colonial rule in the region. In the seminar, we will ask: What role has anticolonial Caribbean literature and art played in shaping the region’s present and future, and in shaping global anticolonial politics? What images, ideas, and master tropes commonly attached to the Caribbean (such as “tourist paradise” imagery) do they challenge? What forms of anticolonial struggle do they propose or advocate for? We will be engaging a wide range of writers, scholars, and artists such as Jamaica Kincaid, Marlon James, Aimé Césaire, M. NourbeSe Philip, and Bob Marley.

Join us in AAAD 391—the core course for the Human Development, Sustainability and Rights (HDSR) Minor!

Below are examples of issues that we will examine in our AAAD 391 discussion-based seminar drawing on developments on the African continent and the African diaspora. To enrich our understanding of these issues, we hope to have guest speakers during some of our discussions about:

• The ways in which civil society organizations have mobilized historically and in the contemporary era for the promotion of human development issues, such as gender equity, economic justice and access to health, education, and housing.
• The emergence and dynamics of public policies aimed at promoting human development, situating these trends in the context of historical legacies, and shifting ideas about development.
• Going beyond a narrow definition of sustainability, we will explore policies and struggles aimed at promoting food security, equitable cities, access to water, transitional justice mechanisms and peace building, and environmental, climate, and land justice.

See you in AAAD 391!
AAAD 395
Research Seminar

CARIBBEAN FEMINIST & QUEER EPISTEMLOGIES

DR. SAMUEL | FALL 2022

In this undergraduate research seminar, students will examine a wide range of scholarly and artistic works that center Caribbean feminist and queer perspectives and analytical frameworks. The course asks: how might attention to these artistic and theoretical contributions deepen and/or transform the ways we think about structural oppression and liberation? About the Caribbean and the world? Students will study research methodologies that are integral to Caribbean studies scholarship, and generate research papers of their own.

T/Th 3:30 - 4:45 PM
in-person instruction
Instructor: Eunice Sahle

Meeting Times: TuTh 9:30AM - 10:45AM

Description: This course explores major conceptual debates in the field of human rights. Further, it examines human rights practices and struggles in selected countries in Africa.
Do you want to understand, enrich and challenge your thinking on the role of language in society? If your answer is yes, enroll in AAAD 421. By the end of the course, students will better understand and appreciate the language situation in Africa and elsewhere in the world. Fundamental questions considered in this course include: What is language? What happens if languages come into contact? What factors influence language choice in multilingual societies like those in Africa? What is the language policy in these countries? Why do languages die and how can they be preserved and/or revitalized?

Prerequisite: Your interest. NO prior knowledge of linguistics is assumed or required.

AAAD.490.001: BLACK BIOGRAPHY

This course examines the lives of African descendants living in the U.S. through the lens of biography. During the semester, students will gain familiarity with a variety of historical methods and archival approaches as they grapple with the complexity of historical analysis. For example, how do scholars uncover the life histories of Black people who did not leave written records? How do scholars handle misrepresentations or misremembering by their historical subjects? Spanning the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, course readings deal with the emergence of modern-day Black biographies as well as the characteristics most important to the genre. Students will develop a research topic, conduct independent research, and write a final paper.

For students who have the AAAD major and are in the African American & diaspora studies concentration, this course counts as a required 400-level course.

For students with the African studies concentration, this course fulfills the requirement that you take a course in the African American & diaspora studies concentration.

SWAH 401 is the first part of Elementary Swahili. Students will be introduced to the basic elements of Standard Swahili language and culture. At the end of this course, students are expected to reach Novice High according to the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages (ACTFL) proficiency guidelines. The course is designed to help students acquire conversational ability on basic topics necessary for survival in a Swahili setting.

Why study Swahili? Swahili is a Bantu language spoken in East and Central Africa in countries such as Kenya, Tanzania, Uganda, Malawi, Burundi, Rwanda and The Democratic Republic of Congo. Knowledge of Swahili language is therefore important to anyone travelling to East and Central Africa to do research, conduct business, or provide services to local communities. Further, the growth of Swahili as a language of wider communication in Africa and a fast-growing international language with many second language speakers and learners around the world cannot be overemphasized. Moreover, after learning Swahili, you will be in a good position to learn hundreds of other Bantu languages spoken in Africa.
Two sections of SWAH 401 will be offered in Fall 2022, including:
